Explanatory Notes

The TITLE INDEX lists the title under which each essay, poem, review, or piece of fiction was published. The AUTHOR INDEX provides a listing under each author's name (in small capitals) of all such published material by that author. In each of these two indexes, the term "author" refers to the exact name under which the item was published, even if such name is a pseudonym or a woman's maiden name.

The SUBJECT INDEX lists all books reviewed under both the title of the book and the name of its author. In addition, there is a subject listing in small capitals for each person who is the subject of an essay and/or review, and a listing in italics of each book which is the subject of an essay. Note that, in this third index, subject entries are filed under the most familiar name of the person (e.g., "GODDEN, RUMER" rather than "DIXON, MRS. RUMER HAYNES" and "DANTE" rather than "ALIGHIERI, DANTE").

Italics are used also to indicate titles in a foreign language or book titles used as part of a new title (e.g., "Ash Wednesday. T. S. Eliot" indicates the original book, but "Notes on Ash Wednesday" is an essay title).

Names beginning with "Mac," "Mc," and "M" are listed exactly as spelled (e.g., "McAlmon" comes after "Maxwell" but before "Meade"). On the contrary, abbreviated words and names are treated as though spelled out (e.g., "St.-John Perse" is listed after "Saint-Helier, Monique" and before "Saints in the Summer-Time").

French and Dutch names using "de" and "van" are filed as used by the person named. If the individual spells "de" or "van" in lower case characters, the name is entered under the main part of the name; if these words are capitalized, the entries appear under the "D" or "V" listing (e.g., "Tocqueville, Alexis de" but "Van Doren, Mark").

Hyphenated names are considered as one word and listed accordingly (e.g., "Bourke-White, Margaret" rather than "White, Margaret Bourke-").
